

ACA/HCFA Lawsuit Garner's Nationwide Support from Profession

Editorial Staff

On November 12, 1998, the American Chiropractic Association filed a lawsuit against the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) to stop new Medicare Part C regulations from being implemented that allow the adjustment to be performed by PTs and other health providers.

The lawsuit is receiving wide support from:

- National Association of Chiropractic Attorneys (NACA)

"NACA is pleased to support the efforts of the ACA in its efforts to assure that Medicare beneficiaries continue to have access to chiropractic. NACA is cognizant that Medicare reimbursement and coverage models often serve as a template for private payor systems. We simply cannot afford to permit the proposed Part C regulatory scheme as a framework for private managed care plans."

-- Paul Lambert, President, NACA

- Kansas Chiropractic Association (KCA)

"Kansas was the first state to pass a chiropractic licensing law and now continues that leadership example by being one of the first state associations to formally endorse the HCFA lawsuit. We commend the ACA for taking charge on this important issue and challenge all other state associations to match or exceed the $5,000 contribution from Kansas."

-- R. Jerry DeGrado, DC, President, KCA

- Congress of Chiropractic State Associations (COCSA)

"The COCSA board of directors has voted to donate to the legal fund. (We) encourage all chiropractic associations and practitioners to investigate this lawsuit. If chiropractors don't fight for chiropractic, who will?"

-- Dale Cohen, DC, President, COCSA

- Pennsylvania Chiropractic Association

"Many, if not all, third-party payers look to HCFA policy when setting their own standards. The PCA realizes that this is a fight for the survival of this profession. That is why we are donating $2,500 and pledging $7,500 more."

The Parker Board has announced the search is on for candidates for president of the college. Reviews of presidential candidates began February 1.

Dr. Rob Czopoth, Parker's chairman of the board, said PCC has "always sought to complete Dr. Jim's dream of philosophical and academic excellence in education." ("Dr. Jim" is James Parker, DC, founder of the college).

"Our challenge," Dr. Czopoth added, "is to find a president with the vision."

Vaccine Group Says Hepatitis Vaccine May Be More Dangerous than Disease Itself

The National Vaccine Information Center reports it has done an "independent analysis of raw computer data" generated by the government's Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS). The data shows that in 1996, there were 872 serious events reported to VAERS in children under 14 years of age who had been injected with the hepatitis B vaccine. Forty-eight children were reported to have died after they were injected with the vaccine.

In 1991, the Centers for Disease Control recommended that all infants be injected with the hepatitis B vaccine before being discharged from the hospital, even though the only newborns at risk mothers. Thirty-five states still require all children to receive three doses of hepatitis B vaccine or be denied entry to day care, kindergarten, high school or college.

In 1990, a year before the CDC issued the order for all children to get the vaccine, there were a total of 21,102 cases of hepatitis B reported in the United States.

Western States Faculty Members Publish Survey on Immunization

To determine the extent to which faculty at chiropractic colleges influence the profession's attitudes toward immunization, a pair of faculty members from Western States Chiropractic College created a survey used at 19 chiropractic colleges (U.S. and Canada).

Fred Colley, PhD, MPH, and Mitchell Hass, DC, MA, developed the questionnaire that polled faculty attitudes and approaches to instruction in immunology and immunizations. The results of the survey were published in the Winter 1998 issue of the Journal of the Neuromusculoskeletal System.

"From the results of this survey, it is obvious there is great interest in this topic," said Dr. Colley. "Most colleges are attempting to instill a responsible attitude in their students regarding the risks, benefits and scientific evidence for and against immunization. It was also interesting to find that some colleges teach this subject in philosophy and pediatric courses as well as in public health offerings."
