

ICA Board Votes for Financial Support for CCE

Editorial Staff

On January 20, the board of directors of the International Chiropractors Association voted unanimously to continue their financial sponsorship for the Council on Chiropractic Education (CCE). The ICA board agreed to grant CCE a total of $86,000 in 1990 at their board meeting in Phoenix, Arizona.

Financial support for CCE is based on the dues-paying, voting doctor of chiropractic membership of the ICA and the ACA on October 31 of each calendar year. In recent years, the two national associations have certified the following membership numbers:

ICA

1988 - 3,192

1989 - 3,297

ACA

1988 - 13,236

1989 - 12, 833

In addition to the general support grant, the ICA board approved an additional legal expense grant of $10,200 to help the CCE defray recent extraordinary legal expenses.

ICA is unique among chiropractic professional organizations in that five chiropractic college presidents serve on ICA's board of directors, with six colleges affiliated with ICA. The six ICA affiliated colleges represent 47% of the chiropractic students in the U.S.

The five college presidents serving on ICA's board include: Dr. Gerard W. Clum, president of Life Chiropractic College-West, San Lorenzo, California; Dr. Sid E. Williams, president of Life College, Marietta, Georgia; Dr. Carl S. Cleveland, Jr., president of Cleveland College of Chiropractic-Los Angeles, California; Dr. John L. Miller, president of Palmer College of Chiropractic-West, Sunnysvale, California; and Dr. Donald P. Kern, president of Palmer College of Chiropractic, Davenport, Iowa.

"ICA's continued support for CCE is an important priority for us," commented Fred Barge, president of ICA. "Besides the fact that 95% of our members are graduates of CCE schools, the ICA board of directors feel that support of CCE is essential to maintaining the standards necessary for educating and training future doctors of chiropractic."
