Chiropractic Takes Orlando by Storm at The National

Editorial Staff

With 3,000 attendees and 270-plus vendors packing the Hyatt Regency in Orlando, Fla., the Florida Chiropractic Association's The National proved to be a significant event for the profession. But if for some reason you did, here is a recap of some of the significant moments during this year's convention and expo:

- The Foundation for Chiropractic Progress celebrated the 123rd birthday of chiropractic with a cake-cutting ceremony and the launch of a new campaign to promote the profession.
- The largest achievement-based scholarship for a student enrolled in a chiropractic college was awarded by ChiroHealthUSA. Brooke Preston, a student at Northwestern Health Sciences University, received the Foxworth Family Chiropractic Scholarship in the amount of $15,000. NWHSU will also receive $10,000.
- Dr. Paul Lombardi of Cocoa Chiropractic Center was named the 2018 Convention Honoree.
- The FCA Board of Directors named its DC of the Year - Dr. Susan Welsh; CA of the Year - Gloria Valdivia; and LMT of the Year - Dolly Wallace.
- Dr. Scott Haldeman received the Lou Sportelli Lifetime Achievement Award.

- Three lucky chiropractors won cash prizes totaling $10,000 during the Presidential Reception.
- There were countless vendor giveaways including lasers, TVs, tables and more.
- Several national groups attended including the World Federation of Chiropractic, American Chiropractic Association, Chiropractic Summit, F4CP, Congress of Chiropractic State Associations and Federation of Licensing Boards. Many took the opportunity to use The National as a meeting place to host private meetings.
