

"DC" Greets New Columnist

Editorial Staff

We are delighted to bring our readers a new column, "Communication Corner" that will be written by an esteemed communicator, Abne M. Eisenberg, D.C., Ph.D. Dr. Eisenberg's column will appear in every third issue of "DC." Our readers will recall a three part series he wrote for us in the latter part of 1989 titled, "How Good a Listener Are You?"

Dr. Eisenberg has an interesting and varied educational background: He's a graduate of LACC and received his Ph.D. in healing arts from Sierra States University; he next attended Queens College (CUNY) and was awarded a B.A. in rhetoric and public address, and an M.A. in public and small group communication.

Abne Eisenberg is a prolific writer: He is the author of Living Communication; Understanding Communication in Business and the Professions; Job Talk; and Call of the Restless Mind. He has co-authored: Nonverbal Communication; Argument: An Alternative to Violence; Argument: A Guide to Formal and Informal Debate; and Painless Public Speaking. Dr. Eisenberg has also been extensively published in numerous journals.

Dr. Eisenberg has taught anatomy at Cleveland College of Chiropractic, and pathology at LACC. He was the chairman of the department of neurology at the Chiropractic Institute of New York; he taught communication at Queens College (CUNY); speech and theatre at Lehman College (CUNY); and literature and communications at Pace University.

We're looking forward to a long and rewarding relationship with Dr. Abne M. Eisenberg. We know you'll enjoy reading his contributions.
