

The Development of Chiropractic Standards of Care

Editorial Staff

There is probably nothing more important in today's health care environment than standards for health care practitioners. Every segment of the general public is crying out for more effective, cost efficient health care.

Where does the chiropractic profession stand on these issues? What do we need to do to demonstrate our economic viability in these cost conscious times?

These three articles are the first in a long series that will attempt to keep you fully informed on this most important issue.

DECEMBER 1990