Chiro Goes on Tour

The "Chiropractic World Tour" begins this year in Europe with an impressive 55-foot racing yacht, Chiro First, serving as an ambassador for the chiropractic profession while participating in various races in the TransAtlantic, South Africa, Australia, California and Hawaii. Chiro First also will be available for vacation trips and seminars. For four years, the yacht will double as a floating billboard, complete with a 60-foot spine imprinted on the mast.

German-American chiropractor Markus Harbort built the yacht with his own hands as a way to tell the story of chiropractic and give back to the profession he says changed his life. The site also features information on corporate sponsorship and promotional items available for purchase.

Chiropractic Colleges Continue Support of Foundation

At the recent meeting of the Association of Chiropractic Colleges (ACC), Dr. Frank Zolli, ACC president, presented the foundation with a $10,000 check - the first payment on the $50,000 pledged by the ACC earlier this year. Texas Chiropractic College President, Dr. Richard Brassard, already a personal contributor to the cause, pledged $5,000 from the college, while Dr. Mark Ziegler, president of Northwestern, pledged $15,000 for next year, in addition to the $15,000 already pledged by the university for 2007.

Other colleges currently supporting the foundation include Cleveland Chiropractic College, New York Chiropractic College, Parker College of Chiropractic, Palmer Colleges of Chiropractic, and Life Chiropractic College West. Dr. Frank Nicci, NYCC president, and Dr. Carl Cleveland III, Cleveland Chiropractic College president, are personal contributors.
